

"A Colonial Apparition" by James Sprunt

Written by Leilani Pickett

Tuesday, March 28, 2017 11:21 AM

---

"A Colonial Apparition: A Story of the Cape Fear" by James Sprunt is a ghost story about a terrible storm

The booklet was published by Harper's Steamboat Line in 1909 and printed in Wilmington on the Mornin

"A Colonial Apparition" by James Sprunt

Written by Leilani Pickett

Tuesday, March 28, 2017 11:21 AM

were more like wolves than they are now'."

"Your information interests me greatly," he continued. "We shall have steam in half an hour: can you beguile the time with something new to me about the river history?"

"Have you ever heard of the execution of the Scottish Highlanders at Brunswick during the American Revolution?" asked McMillan.

"The subject is entirely strange to me," replied the Captain, "pray proceed."

"My great-grandfather," continued Mr. McMillan, "was William McMillan, of Edinboro, who enlisted with the Camerons in the Rebellion of '45; and after Culloden, was compelled to leave his country.

"He was fortunate in being personally acquainted with Governor Gabriel

"A Colonial Apparition" by James Sprunt

Written by Leilani Pickett

Tuesday, March 28, 2017 11:21 AM

---

After the Captain hears Moby-Dick's tale, he decides to chase the "White-Jacket," as strange as the name is. The white

More From the Scrapbook